APM Terminals Sweeps 2007 PMA Safety Awards

The global terminal network's three US West Coast facilities are all winners in the annual Pacific Maritime Association Safety Awards

Los Angeles, California - APM Terminals North America celebrated a clean sweep of the Pacific Maritime Association Safety Awards announced last month. APM Terminals Tacoma, APM Terminals Pier 400 (Los Angeles) and APM Terminals Oakland were each recognized at the 59th Annual PMA Safety Awards celebrations in their respective U.S. West Coast PMA regions. APM Terminals Oakland won First Place in the Class C container group category at the PMA Northern California Area Safety Awards, and also was recognized for achievement in reduction of the Lost Time Rate in 2007.

APM Terminals Pier 400 won the First Place Safety Award in the Class "A" Container Terminal Operator category for Los Angeles/Long Beach Harbors. The facility also won the First Place Group "A" Container Companies Coast Award, and received a Coast Accident Prevention Award for a Reduction in Injury Rate Three Consecutive Years and an Area Award for Reduced Injury/Illness Rate for 2007.

APM Terminals Tacoma won the First Place Safety Award in the Class C container category for the Washington State Area, as well as the 2nd place Coast Award in the Class C container category for Accident Prevention.

"We are driving safety initiatives from top-to-bottom through our organization and I am proud that our terminals have been recognized for their accomplishments," said APM Terminals'

North America President Eric Sisco. “Safety is everyone’s business and I am confident that we will continue to be recognized as a safety leader through our consistent, positive and progressive approach.”

“This year, we won the award in every category in which we were eligible,” said Alan McCorkle, senior vice president for APM Terminals Pacific based in Los Angeles. “This tremendous accomplishment is a true testament to the effort and dedication our team places on keeping our people safe from harm.”
